INTRO

In January 2020, the mainstream media presented the gigantic forest fires in Australia to viewers with apocalyptic footage, as an alleged consequence of man-made climate change, thus adding fuel to the heated climate debate. But the investigative Australian Internet platform "The Crow House" reveals quite different connections with its shocking video: Large international corporations direct rivers into gigantic reservoirs for their fracking projects. The country dries out and burns over large areas, a whole continent is ruined, and the population is evacuated to the big cities. By no means is man-made CO₂ climate change to blame, but rather a "man-made" natural disaster due to overexploitation, which is hidden by politicians and mainstream media behind the alleged man-made climate change. Hard to believe? Simply do your own research using the sources listed. No less apocalyptic are the other topics of this issue, which one should face before "one's neck is snapped".

How should a "normal" nation behave?

enm. On January 10th, 2020, two days after the US regime assassinated General Soleimani in Baghdad, US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo made a statement to the press at the White House about Iran: "I just want Iran to behave like a normal nation." To become a "normal" nation like the "exemplary" USA, Iran would have to extend its security interests from the region to the whole world and overthrow unwanted governments that do not follow Tehran's orders. Iran would have to set up military bases all over the world, manned by hundreds of thousands of soldiers with all the relevant military equipment and procure thousands of nuclear bombs. Iran would have to become the most dominant and ruthless military, economic and cultural force in the world and use this dominance to eliminate and destroy any country and

Mexico's president demands release of WikiLeaks' journalist Julian Assange

enm. Mexico's president López Obrador spoke out last Friday in favor of the release of the detained journalist and WikiLeaks' spokesman Julian Assange. He also called for the immediate end to the psychological torture to which Assange is being exposed to in the British HM Prison Belmarsh. Excuse me - ... mental torture in government, all ideologies, groups, movements or individuals that stand in its way. To become a "normal" nation, Iran would have to arm and deploy extremist terrorist organizations around the world as proxies to destabilize and plunge countries into chaos that do not follow Tehran's dictates. Iran would have to interfere in all democratic elections around the world and manipulate the outcome, and should the people get their way, get rid of the politicians legally elected by the people who do not serve the interests of Tehran. Furthermore, Iran would have to control the entire economy of the world, dictate its currency as the trading currency in order to be able to snatch and exploit the resources of this planet free of charge. And much more. We can only hope that Iran will continue to stay away from this "normality". [2] a democratic country? So the US administration will soon have their army march in there to protect basic human and democratic rights? Far from it, the measures against Assange defy human rights and are carried out by the self-appointed world police operating under the direction of the US government! [4]

Khamenei: Overcoming division through cooperation!

hm. The leader of the Islamic Revolution, Ayatollah Khamenei, said at a meeting with the Qatari Emir Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad Al-Thani in Tehran in early January 2020 that the "measures" taken by the United States and its allies were corrupt in nature. These are the main cause for the current tensions in the region. Khamenei called on the regional countries to intensify cooperation in order to counteract the divisive US measures based on corruption. Perhaps this is generally THE way out of regional and global crises: Cooperation and working for the common good instead of a sense of superiority and self-interest! [3]

US Global pressure: "Stop buying Iranian oil or face sanctions"

hm. Washington has managed to cut Iran off from "probably over 95 percent of oil revenues," said Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin. "I sat down with the Chinese officials. They flew in a delegation to meet with us and the State Department to talk about this. They've cut off all state-owned companies from buying oil." Mnuchin continued: "We will continue to pursue sanctions against China and anybody else around the world that continues to do business with them (Iran)." Regarding the European countries he added: "The Europeans are adhering

Today cattle, tomorrow our children?

pg. On December 20th, 2019 the so-called “measles protection law” was approved by the German Federal Council in spite of much objection from competent doctors and the population. Although the benefit of this vaccination is still in question due to the side effects and damages, from March 1st, 2020 mandatory vaccination is now obligatory in Germany, along with all kinds of reprisals for vaccination refusers. A similar situation can be found with the bluetongue disease, occurring in ruminants like sheep, cattle and goats. Between 2008 and 2010 there was a general mandatory vaccination, which was later reversed because of frequent severe vaccination damage. In the Federal State of Baden-Württemberg, Germany in December 2019, mandatory vaccinations were carried out by the responsible authorities who were suspicious of a case of sick animals. Six of the animals that were compulsorily vaccinated under police power died within only a few days, having all been certified by the vet as being healthy beforehand. Who guarantees that the mandatory measles vaccination does not cause similarly tragic consequences? [7]

“In any case, I am of the opinion that mandatory vaccination is a brutality, a pigtail that belongs to the former times of high-minded bureaucratic paternalism, but no longer among a decent, civilized people”.
Dr. med. Haehnle, Reutlingen

Climate change: scientists 97% agreement never existed

hm. “97 percent of climate scientists agree that climate change is essentially man-made.” This is roughly the result of the study by the cognitive psychologist John Cook in 2013, but according to the unveilings by Markus Fiedler and Prof. Hans-Jürgen Bandelt, the study deliberately conceals the actual data basis and provides a misleading summary of the results. The summary by Cook et al. should therefore have more accurately read: In 99.46% of all scientific work there is no evidence of agreement with the thesis of the predominant role of humans in climate change. Many consider the human contribution to be lower or do not make a clear statement on this. Only 0.54% of all publications claim that humans have a predominant share in climate change. Conclusion by Fiedler/Bandelt: What has been and still is being done with the Cook study in the mainstream media is fraudulent and a deliberate deception of the public. [8]

Gigantic population programming through vaccination

enm. On December 9th, 2019 the British Independent published a sensational article on its website about a man who had received a bone marrow donation and after four years found that the donor’s DNA could be detected in his blood and saliva. But not only that: The DNA in his sperm cells had been completely replaced with the donor’s DNA. Does this mean children he begets in the future will not carry his own body characteristics but those of the bone marrow donor? Against this background, the issue of organ donation should be critically questioned, as well as vaccination with the new genetically contaminated vaccines, such as those contained in the measles quadruple vaccine PRIORIX TETRA. This so-called DNA-vaccine contains the complete gene of a male fetus, as an Italian group of scientists found out. Is the population to be reprogrammed with foreign characteristics via vaccines? [6]

Closing Point
Annual weather phenomena is declared to be a direct result of climate change. The 25th World Climate Conference was held in Madrid in early December 2019. Some of the leading media used this as an opportunity to present a frightening scenario about the Victoria Falls in South East Africa. Using a comparison of photographs of the waterfalls in January 2019, when the falls carried the usual amount of water, and from December 2019 with almost no water, the magazine “Der Spiegel” wanted to give the reader the impression of the consequences of climate change. Yet it was not mentioned that December is the last month of the annual dry season and therefore the Victoria Falls carry very little water at that time of year. At the end of December there is always a lot of rain, so that in January, as usual, larger amounts of water rush down the Victoria Falls. As these annually recurring weather phenomena are unknown to most readers, the media have an easy job of misusing them as evidence of climate change. So be alert to any extreme reporting by mainstream media, do your own research and form your own opinion. [9]
