~ No. 7/20: CORONAVIRUS ~

INTRO

The corona virus currently dominates the headlines and entire cities have already been quarantined in Europe. On March 4th, 2020, the Swiss Radio and TV (SRF) reported about the "Corona Crisis". According to Daniel Koch, head of the Transmissible Diseases Division at the Swiss Federal Office of Public Health (FOPH), there is great public interest in the virus. Currently, around 2,000 people a day call the Federal Corona Helpline, and the FOPH's website has been visited 3.7 million times in the past weeks. On February 28th, 2020, the Swiss Federal Council had ordered that events with more than 1,000 people may not take place. This affects concerts, soccer and ice-hockey games, as well as the Geneva Motor Show and the Carnival of Basel. Are these measures justified, or is a mosquito being turned into an elephant here? Even the SRF news show "Rundschau" of March 4th, 2020 asks the question: "Corona: crisis or hysteria?" In order to enable you to form your opinion as freely as possible, this issue tries to answer the same question with interesting dissenting voices.

No serious danger from the coronavirus!?

db./rs. Thomas Röper, German media critic and operator of anti-spiegel.ru, wrote on February 26th, 2020 and March 1st, 2020 about the facts and figures around the coronavirus. Currently, 86,992 people worldwide are said to be infected with the coronavirus, 79,826 of them in China. This was not much he wrote, considering the fact that in Germany alone over 79,000 people have fallen ill with the current flu epidemic. Or in the USA, more than 10,000 people had already died of flu this season, and "only" 3,214 people worldwide of the coronavirus so far. With over seven billion people, this was not a worrying figure. The first WHO figures based on 44,000 patients would come to the following conclusion: About 80 percent of the patients would have only a mild form of the disease, 14 percent a severe course, 5 percent a critical course and "only" 2 percent a fatal course. Where the disease ended fatally, most of those affected had previous illnesses such as high blood pressure, diabetes or cardiovascular diseases. Röper's conclusion: In his eyes there is no reason to panic, because the coronavirus itself was not very dangerous. [1]

Books describe corona pandemic scenario

sr./kw. The events in Wuhan with the corona virus are reminiscent of the 1981 thriller "The Eyes of Darkness" by the US bestseller author Dean Koontz and the 2008 book "End of Days" by Sylvia Browne. They describe the current pandemic scenario in detail: Dean Koontz writes about a virus originating from a Chinese bioweapons laboratory in Wuhan that causes a pandemic. Sylvia Browne predicts a pandemic in 2020 in which people will die of lung failure! So there are the following incredible analogies:

1. The trigger → a virus (in "The Eyes of Darkness")
2. Where was it developed? → In a bioweapons lab in China (in "The Eyes of Darkness")
3. What city? → In Wuhan (in "The Eyes of Darkness")
4. When? → In the year 2020 (in "End of Days")
5. With what consequences? → People die from lung failure. (in "End of Days")

In the thriller "The Eyes of Darkness" the virus is denoted as "perfect weapon". It kills the enemy without a fight and without devastating the country.

What is the probability that a crime thriller written almost 40 years ago comes true in this way? In purely mathematical terms, it happens once in 355 million years that so many details of the pandemic outbreak coincide, as in the thriller "Eyes of Darkness". [3]

Coronavirus: "Random product" or bioweapon?

sr./kw. Since mid-January, the coronavirus has dominated world headlines. Seemingly out of nowhere, a virus suddenly appears in the Chinese city of Wuhan and terrifies the world! Where does the supposedly dangerous coronavirus come from? There are various reports in the media that snakes, bats or even pangolin animals are the cause or carrier of the virus. On the other hand there are the research results of the virologist Dr. Alan Cantwell. With 107 references to experiments described in the database of scientific publications "Pub Med", he proves that the genetic manipulation of corona viruses has been taking place in both medical and military laboratories since 1987. Could it be that the coronavirus was released purposefully at the site of the outbreak? Close to the food and fish market in Wuhan, where the virus first appeared, is the Wuhan Institute of Virology. In addition, there is another laboratory in Wuhan that works with viruses, which is – the WuXi PharmaTech Inc, financed by the American billionaire George Soros. In view of these facts, the legitimate question arises as to whether the coronavirus occurred accidentally or was deliberately used as a military bioweapon. [2]

Coronavirus – worst case scenario for the global economy db./br. On 01/03/2020 the finance expert Ernst Wolff reported in a special broadcast of the news platform KenFM that the world was in an exceptional situation. The Chinese economy had been shut down for several weeks. Since China was responsible for a third of the world's annual economic growth and a quarter of world trade, the current developments were of major economic importance. In addition, nine million companies around the world were already interlinked with China. According to Wolff, the current situation could be explained as follows: "The current global financial system resembles a drug junkie who is now in the intensive care unit. Having the coronavirus pop up in this situation and bring the world's most important economy to a standstill is about the same as someone who rushes into the Intensive Care Unit and tears away all the tubes that maintain the junkie's vital functions." The combination of coronavirus and the currently severely damaged global financial system is nothing more and nothing less than an economic and financial worst-case scenario – the largest conceivable incident, said Wolff. [5]

To consider: Who is spreading fear and terror?

The enlightening website uncutnews.ch published the following reader's letter on March 2nd, 2020: When I observe what is currently happening with the CORONA VIRUS worldwide, the following story spontaneously comes to mind: A student is on his way to a big city. At the city gate he meets Death, who sits in the shadow of the city wall. The student sits down next to him and asks: "What are you up to?" Death replies, "I'm about to go into town and get me 100 people!" The student gets scared, runs into town and screams: "Death is on the way into town! He's going to grab 100 people!" People run into their houses, barricade themselves... But there is no hiding from death. Four weeks later the student leaves the town again – and again sees Death sitting in the shadow of the city wall. He runs up to him and yells at him: "You liar! You came to grab 100 people! But now over 5,000 are dead!" Death rises very slowly and says: "I got my 100 right on schedule, just like every week. The old, weak and sick ... The others were killed by FEAR! And YOU carried it into town!" [6]

Closing Point •

The managing director of the Swiss association "Netzwerk Impfentscheid", Daniel Trappitsch, writes in his brochure "Corona Virus Panic Wave" on March 1st, 2020: "What's going on at the moment regarding the Corona panic-mongering is like a bad movie: The script was written a long time ago and now the film is being shot. Whether the film goes through all the way to the end depends on those moviegoers, who endure the bad film and remain seated. If many leave the cinema before the movie ends, it will be stopped. Or in other words: Imaginary vaccination is compulsory and nobody takes part." [8]*

Criminal offence: Frightening the population is./br. The daily news regarding coronavirus is making the population fearful and anxious. But is there a real danger, or is it possible that the criminal offence of 'frightening the population' is being committed? A 12 minute KLa.TV documentary film from September 23rd, 2018 explains how frightening the population is carried out in a very practical way. The following is a short excerpt from it: The Swiss Criminal Code (StGB) Art. 258 defines the offence of 'frightening the population' as follows: "Whoever frightens the population by threatening or feigning danger to life, limb or property shall be punished with imprisonment for up to three years or a fine." Frightening peoples is a clearly defined criminal offence. Despite the criminal nature of the offence, peoples are deliberately being frightened every day – worldwide. [...] And this is how these mechanisms work in practical everyday life: The bought mass media are frightening the peoples each day, because they are the servile mouthpieces of those who continually get bigger and bigger, richer and richer and more and more powerful through horror scenarios. [...] In summary, we must call for extreme questioning of those who, on the one hand, frighten the peoples and, on the other hand, enrich themselves through the ways out of this horror Spread the word, for this must change.
